(26th August to 4th September, 2019)

Organized by:
School of Management, Gautam Buddha University, Greater Noida, Uttar Pradesh-201312

Along with the technological advancement, rapid changes are being seen these days in the field of research. To keep pace with the changing trends and challenges, in the different fields of social sciences, one has to go through a formal research methodological process. Keeping in view the necessity of research methodology, this Research Methodology Course (RMC) is conceptualized and targeted for M.Phil, Ph.D/PGD research scholars in the different disciplines of Social sciences. The RMC will help the participants to acquaint themselves with the dynamic trends of research methodology which may shape their research work in the right direction on timely and meaningful manner.

In today's competitive global environment research plays a very important role in academics and business world. By this RMC participants will be able to understand the different kind of data and techniques. Participants can use these different techniques in their research, Ph.D and project in effective and efficient manner.

We hope this RMC will develop a think-tank to resolve the problems linked with research and data analysis.

OBJECTIVES
