Dr. J.P. Sharma, I.A.S. (Retd.)

Vice- Chancellor

From the Desk Of Dean , (SOHSS)

As Dean of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences (SOHSS), it is a pleasure, and my privilege, to welcome you to the Department of Social Work at Gautam Buddha University. The School offers Master of Social Work (MSW) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degrees in Social Work, with a view to enacting GBU's overarching elements of distinctiveness. The Department of Social Work was established in the year 2011, keeping in mind the need to prepare students for professional social work service and leadership, and to make them work effectively within teams, including social work teams, multi- and inter-disciplinary teams. The students from Social Work Program are engaged into field work at different NGOs and other organizations, learning how societal needs can be addressed collaboratively and from multiple perspectives. The faculty collaborates with communities, conducts research, and disseminates knowledge in response to the needs of individuals and families living in diverse and multicultural environments.

We lead the scholarly search for innovative and effective solutions to human concerns and look forward to build and strengthen relationships with individuals and organizations in moving towards advancing the objectives of social work profession.

Dr. Neeti Rana

Dean (I/C), School of Humanities and Social sciences

From the Desk of Head of Department

Looking back in memory and a little bit of pride at the last twelve months of evolution of the Department of Social Work, from its small beginning to its continuous and its power to last, I see a tree growing its branches based on the basic tenet of the principles of social work practice. As social scientists, I see the future is exceptionally bright and we tend to make a mark in spite of the challenges posed in our path to-wards attaining our goal. We have developed a system of teaching practices in a more structured and organized manner; we organized events, networked with external organizations, made data bases of colleges, universities and civil society organizations, we engaged students in various outreach programs and so on.

We have a set of students from different backgrounds eager to take up professional challenge and achieve excellence in their respective areas of expertise. I wish them all the best for their future and present the placement brochure of Masters in Social Work 2017 batch.

Dr. Subhashis Bhadra

H.O.D, Department of Social Work

From the Desk of Field–work Coordinator

The profession of social work is hugely based on the principle of ITP which is ‘Integration of Theory into Practice’. Without a strong fieldwork orientation, the two years of Masters programme in Social Work would be redundant. I have been associated with the fieldwork coordination since the beginning therefore my attachment to it is both personal and professional. We, as a department focus on building systems, procedures and documents which would become the foundation for the coursework as well as develop a systematic structure of field exposure. The purpose of fieldwork is also to enable students with an interface between classroom lecture and the daily happenings. They develop skills to deal with people, to deal with problems in their own lives, determine which approaches work in practice, develop a professional identity, learn to use supervision and develop analytical wisdom to life.

Each student spends 17 hours in a week in an organization/community to learn the nuance of the social work methodology which also includes report writing and interaction with field supervisor (every student is assigned one supervisor who provides them one-on-one attention on their social action and reporting skills). The rigorous theoretical and practical exercise of the students qualifies them for the professional contribution. They all will be great assets for their respective areas of work.

Dr. Sibghat Usmani

Field Work Coordinator

From the Desk of Coordinator, Departmental Seminar

Departmental seminar enriches and enhances the knowledge, skills and competencies which are fundamental aspects of employability. In seminar/article review there is enough space for analytical, creative and critical thinking. Seminar/article reviews bring insight about what new developments which are taking place and how one has to equip with. Departmental seminar / article review is scheduled on every Monday from 2:30 PM to 4:30 PM. Every seminar/article review session is chaired by a faculty member. Students have to consult respective faculty member before two weeks of their seminar and discuss with them about their seminar topic/article review. The presentation is made in power point. Separate handout has to be prepared. Each student is given one hour time which includes presentation, questions, clarifications, corrections and discussion. All activities of our department prepare students eminently to be employable. I take this opportunity to invite organisations for placement. I would like to wish students all the very best.

The Department strives to enhance the intellectual faculties of young professionals through both scholastic and field endeavours by engaging them in classroom discussions, field visits and on-field training with institutions and open communities, expose them to discourses in national and international events and so on.

Equipped with one of the best facilities, the department attempts to maximally utilize them for the student's benefit. The faculty at the department has earned their reputé not only within the university but equally at the national and international level.

Vision

“To nurture and develop dynamic and competent social work professionals to address the challenges and concerns of the 21st century that facilitates changes at the level of policy formation and academic advancement. It is an endeavour to inculcate research aptitude, analytical ability, innovative programming and thrusting on development models for social work practice in different spheres of human existence”.

Department Pedagogy

The department aims at inducing the essential knowledge and skills of social work. But the quintessential element is to create an environment where the values of social work are ingrained in each and every mind. The process of learning is interactive and participatory, best facilitated by different components like regular assignments, tests and audio-visual presentations.

The individual conference and group conferences form the core of the course curriculum, promoting clarity of vision, independence of attitude and enhance analytical and communication skills.

Apart from the classroom training on theory, students are provided a chance to engage in number of activities within the classroom set-up like engaging in group discussion which ensures that they learn the art of arguing without disrespecting individual views and neither compromising with their beliefs and thoughts.

Field work

Field work training holds a pivotal place in development of social work students. The department is widely known for its rigorous field work programme. The department course design enables a student to get about 1440 hours of rigorous training for MSW. Post graduate students work with NGO's, government, social welfare agencies, and business organizations and in communities as well for more than sixty days in a year. They perform various activities during the field work. They organise health camps, clean up campaigns, perform Nukkad Natak and work for the improvement in various sectors like health, education and environment in the community and perform different workshops including life skills in the organisations. Through field work training students are provided great opportunities to integrate their theoretical knowledge with practice and acquire handful of experience to deal with a variety of complex problems.

Departmental Seminars

Seminars and conferences are an integral part of academic life. There are weekly seminars organised. They provide a platform to both students and academicians to manage many skills at a time like presentation skills, use of technological skills (use of computers and projectors), time management skills, writing skills, questioning and answering skills, handling pressure during presentations and generating a sense of professionalism while presenting.

Workshops

The department conducts “Programme Media workshop” for students of social work every year. The relevance of programme Media workshop is that it builds the skills about conducting street play, community mobilization, and awareness generation by theatre, use of folk media and adhering the students. Each activity in program media is designed in a way that it can benefit students in the coming future. Furthermore it intends to broaden the scope to learn more activities on their own to enhance their capabilities and knowledge.

The department conducts Life skill workshops and various skill labs to enhance the skill of the students which are essential for the growth of a student in a holistic way like SPSS (statistical package for social sciences), project formulation etc. for the students as per the requirement of the course in social work.

There were workshops on Gender sensitization, Gender and Linguistics and Islamic Education in India. In addition to the mentioned, students are sent to attend national and international conferences anywhere in NCR.

These visits are intended to get a glimpse of the world of social work and the expectations set for them.
